Language Focus: Simple Past Tense vs. Present Perfect

Simple Past: We use the simple past to talk about a completed action that has started and finished in the past.

Form: Regular verbs end with -ed
e.g. walked; listened; learned irregular verbs have different endings

e.g. ran, hit, was and were, felt

Present Perfect: We use present perfect to: 1. Talk about things that have started and finished in the past, but are still important today. 2. Talk about things that have started in the past but still are not completed actions. 3. Talk about something that has been recently completed.

Form: have or has + past participle of the verb
e.g. have been; has heard; have learned; has seen

1. Fill in the blanks with the correct form of verb (either simple past or present perfect)

My mother and I (go) _____ to the market every Saturday when I (am) _____ a child, and I (love) _____ it! I (not/be) _____ back to my favourite market since I (am) _____ 11 years old, because I (move) _____ at that age. I always (buy) _____ toys there with the money I (get) _____ for doing odd jobs around my neighbourhood. Even though I am older now and I don't live near any markets anymore, my love for them (never/change) _____.

2. Look at sentences from this week's stories and underline the simple past or present perfect verbs and explain why that verb form was used there. (The last sentence was created to provide you with more practice.)

Transcripts of Weekly news stories

	MARCH 13 TH WEEKLY NEWS STORIES	TIME
Introduction	Hi, this is Rosa Marchitelli . You're listening to Learning English with CBC for the week of March 13 th .	0:00
Story 1	Calgary police chief, Rick Hanson, is retiring and he received a sustained standing ovation at today's city council meeting. Hanson has completed 40 years in policing. Mayor Naheed Nenshi says the strong team of deputy chiefs, superintendents and inspectors assembled by Hanson is his true legacy to the police service. Hanson said he's grateful to have the support and leadership of city council. His last day on the job as police chief is this Friday. An acting chief has not yet been named to replace him. Sources have told CBC News that Hanson will seek the PC party nomination in the provincial riding of Calgary Cross later this month.	0:07
Story 2	The city says the public will soon be able to use the Shaganappi pedestrian bridge. The 5.9-million dollar overpass didn't fit when crews first tried to install it in January. That's because the supports didn't line up with the pillars. The city's director of transportation and infrastructure, Michael Thompson says they were off by about 11 centimetres on either side. Thompson says it's still not clear how that happened. The bridge is scheduled to be open sometime in May. City officials say taxpayers will not be on the hook for fixing this glitch.	0:56
Story 3	The Canadian Cancer Society hopes legislation will put the use of tanning beds back in the spotlight, especially their use by those under the age of 18. Alberta and Saskatchewan are the only two provinces that don't have regulations restricting tanning bed use. Sarah Hawkins is a research analyst with the Canadian Cancer Society. She says although the government should provide strict guidelines, parents should educate their children about the risks associated with tanning beds. She says, "It's one of those things that parents don't necessarily think of when it they talk to their children, but it is a significant risk to their health and one that most kids aren't really considering as a risk among the things they partake in on a regular basis." The new legislation is expected to be introduced in the spring session.	1:38
